SC Backs States' Power to Ban Online Gaming

Court says states can ban online games, including skill-based ones, if they threaten public wellbeing

Indu Bhan

New Delhi: The Supreme Court upheld bans by Tamil Nadu and Karnataka on online gaming, rejecting the arguments of industry groups and skill-based gaming companies. The court said states can ban online games, including those of skill, if they pose a threat to them and the wellbeing of the public.

THE APEX COURT RULING
The judgment came on various appeals filed by Karnataka and Tamil Nadu against their respective high courts' decisions that struck down the bans on online gaming

The bench of justices JB Pardiwala and R Mahadevan endorsed the laws enacted by Tamil Nadu and Karnataka criminalising online games, irrespective of whether they are games of skill, if played for a bet, money or any other stake. "Since betting and gambling are treated as res extra commercium (things outside commerce), no fundamental right can be claimed to carry on such activities," it said. If games of substantial skill are conducted in a manner that they start to pose problems for the state or cause harm to the public, states will not be powerless to regulate such games, the apex court ruled. "When the element of betting and gambling enters the picture, the nature of the game ceases to be of relevance," the judges held, adding that stating money on an uncertain event raises concerns of addiction and drives the desire to gain even more. The apex court said online money gaming has been disturbing the tranquility of the public by making betting and gambling more normalised and accessible. Therefore, states can invoke public order and seek to curb it, the court said. The state's competence to regulate certain activities also enables it to prohibit them, the top court said, adding that the Tamil Nadu and Karnataka laws are supported by empirical data, contrary to the gaming companies' assertion. The judgment came on various appeals filed by Karnataka and Tamil Nadu against their respective high courts' decisions that struck down the bans on online gaming. Skill-based gaming firms Junglees Games, Play Games24x7 and Head Digital Works as well as the All India Gaming Federation and Federation of Indian Fantasy Sports had supported the high court rulings revoking laws banning online rummy and poker with stakes. They argued that games of skill are a distinct class and that this had been recognised by courts as distinct from games of chance. This distinction is vital because states do not have legislative competence over games of skill but may regulate games of chance, the firms said, adding that when one is playing a game of skill, whether it is played physically or virtually, it makes no difference. Stating that cybercrime had reached epic proportions as 28,000 cases were filed in just three years, the state governments argued that a law against online gaming is needed to maintain public order. Several people have committed suicide and families have been ruined due to online gaming, they said.

New Delhi: The Directorate General of GST Intelligence (DGGI) is set to press ahead with tax recovery proceedings against online gaming companies, after the Supreme Court upheld its decision to retroactively levy 28% GST on the full face value of bets. "This is a big win and now we can go ahead with the aggressive recovery process," a DGGI official told ET. The DGGI had issued show-cause notices alleging tax evasion of around ₹1 lakh crore against about 80 online gaming companies and casinos. Gaming companies approached various high courts challenging the tax demands. The Supreme Court later transferred pleas from nine high courts to itself. The top court's ruling on Wednesday validates the revenue authorities' stance.

Revenue department is open to engaging with industry stakeholders on concerns regarding penalties and interest, says an official

Senior officials from the revenue department said they will study the judgment. The revenue department remains open to engaging with industry stakeholders on concerns regarding penalties and interest following the Supreme Court ruling, the official added. In the original show-cause notice issued to Gameskraft in 2022, the DGGI had sought GST dues of about ₹21,000 crore for the period between 2017 and 2022, along with interest and penalties, in one of the largest tax demands ever raised. This became a template for similar proceedings initiated against several online gaming operators.

28% GST VERDICT JOLTS GAMING SECTOR

Real-money Gaming Firms Staring at a ₹92kcr Question

Pranav Mukul

New Delhi: The Supreme Court's ruling upholding retrospective 28% goods and services tax on online gaming companies has shifted the focus from a years-long legal battle to the next big question facing the sector: how and when tax demands of nearly ₹92,000 crore could crystallise into liabilities. The apex court on Wednesday upheld the government's retrospective imposition of 28% GST on online gaming companies, backing tax demands on past transactions in a ruling that could have major financial implications for the sector.

A lawyer representing one of the large gaming companies involved in the dispute said platforms will now have an opportunity to individually respond to GST department's show-cause notices. "Given the government's stance, it is likely that the tax department will move ahead with demanding back taxes," the lawyer said. "Companies can seek a review of the Supreme Court's order before a larger bench. Even if the GST department issues demand notices, the option to appeal the final order remains open."

A senior gaming industry executive, who asked not to be named, said retrospective applicability of the tax means interest liabilities could continue mounting while adjudication plays out. "The situation is difficult from both ends because we need to ensure the adjudication process is followed and the department's calculations are justified. That is where any demand can be challenged," the executive said.

DS Group Brings UK-based Ben's Cookies to India

New Delhi: DS Group has inked an exclusive franchise partnership with British bakery chain Ben's Cookies, the Noida-based fast-moving consumer goods company announced on Wednesday. The bakery chain will set up about 10 stores in this financial year, said Sanskriti Gupta, head of Ben's Cookies in India. "Ben's will capitalise on premiumisation and higher consumer awareness to gain share," she said. —Our Bureau

Hyundai Raises Vehicle Prices by up to ₹12,800

New Delhi: Hyundai Motor India (HMI) on Wednesday said it will hike prices of its vehicles by up to ₹12,800, depending on the model and variants. The price revision is attributed to a combination of various cost escalations, it added. This is in continuation of HMI's announcement on April 8, 2026, when the car maker in a regulatory filing announced a 1 per cent hike across its portfolio from next month, citing various cost escalations, effective next month. —PTI
